WOMEN + MEN: BY ADDING WE WIN

A different 8M is possible

Manifesto:

Leave us alone. Enough of so much deception and manipulation

We go out on the street because we are tired of the manipulation and ideological use of women by supremacist and radical feminism that claims to defend women but destroys her identity. Enough of politicizing women.

And we go out together, men and women, to shout that we are fed up with the continuous attack on men. Radical feminism keep them in the spotlight, they are prejudged and forced to renounce their masculinity.

Men are no our enemies, they are our partners and allies.

We want to be women, we need you to be men

They talk about equality but they mean an egalitarianism that denies the differences that complement and enrich men and women.

We specially claim the different, complementary and never interchangeable roles of father and mother.

Today is the day to raise our voice very loudly in favor of complementarity and to demand radical feminism to leave our homes, our children's schools and our professional activities alone.

We are different and complementary, but equal

We demand the modification or elimination of laws, measures and privileges that discriminate against men and promote confrontation of sexes.

We want laws that protect women without prejudging men.

Women are equal to men in rights and duties. We do not tolerate having less than men, but neither more.

The time has come to talk about equity and solidarity.

Women are not discriminated today for being women but for being, or intend to be, moms

We go out in the streets to denounce what many claim for and others silence: that women today, in the western countries, are discriminated against just because they are, or can possibly be, moms.

We denounce the harassment of motherhood especially in the workplace, and of those who have renounced their professional development to devote themselves to their family. The family that is, as simple as that, the only future of society.

We demand that social leaders and those who participate in decision-making in the labor market, the economics, culture and politics, assume once and for all, that women who have children contribute to the development of businesses and the national economy. That motherhood is a very significant treasure in professional development and that it is a good for the whole society.
